

21 January 2022

Bank of China (Hong Kong) will issue collection notice on “Commemorative Banknote of the Olympic Winter Games Beijing 2022” from 24 January onwards

Bank of China (Hong Kong) announces that after careful consideration and assessment, it has decided to arrange successful applicants to collect the “Commemorative Banknote of the Olympic Winter Games Beijing 2022” (“Commemorative Banknote”) starting from 12 February 2022. Stringent precautionary measures against COVID will be put in place at the collection venues. Starting from 24 January, successful applicants will receive the collection notice via their chosen notification method. They may also check the collection details in “Check Application Result” on the Commemorative Banknote website (banknote.bochk.com/beijing2022).

To ensure the health and safety of its customers and staff, the Bank will implement a series of preventive measures at the collection venues including regular cleaning and disinfection of the venues, mask requirement and temperature checks for staff. Customers will also be required to take body temperature and wear face masks when entering the venues. In addition, crowd control measures and queue management will be taken to minimise the number of attendees and waiting time at each time slot and ensure social distancing. The Bank will continue to closely monitor the situation and make appropriate arrangements if necessary. We sincerely thank the public for their understanding in postponing the collection and their support for the Commemorative Banknote.
