- Only accept not more than 10 transaction instructions per trading day.
- Will not accept buying odd lots through Mobile Banking via securities margin accounts.
- Upon receipt of the customer's confirmation of the buy instruction of a Market Order, the transaction amount and additional charges (including brokerage fees and other charges) will be calculated based on the 10 spreads from the nominal price quoted at the time when the order is processed. The sum will be withheld from your available investment amount.

Equity Linked Products ("ELP") Important Risk Warnings

Equity-linked products include "Equity-Linked Investments" ("ELI") which is issued by BOCHK and "Third Party Structured Note linked to Equity" ("Note") which is not issued by BOCHK

ELI has been authorized by the Securities and Futures Commission ("SFC"). However, the SFC's authorization does not imply its endorsement or recommendation of this Product referred to in the Offering Documents nor does it imply that SFC guarantees the commercial merits of this Product or its performance. ELI is unlisted structured investment products embedded with derivatives.

Third Party Structured Note linked to Equity is not issued by BOCHK. The relevant offering documents of Note distributed by BOCHK have NOT been reviewed by any regulatory authority in Hong Kong and Notes are only available to Private Wealth professional investor as prescribed by BOCHK from time to time. You should exercise caution in relation to the relevant investment offer. If you are in any doubt about any of the contents of the relevant offering documents, you should obtain independent professional advice.

ELP are complex products. You should exercise caution in relation to ELP.

Derivatives: Derivatives have a high degree of price variability and are subject to occasional rapid and substantial changes. Compared to conventional securities, derivatives can be more sensitive to changes in interest rates or to sudden fluctuations in market prices due to both the low margin deposits required, and the extremely high degree of leverage involved in derivative products.

Investment risk: The prices of ELP may go up and down and may be volatile. The ELP are also subject to the risk of vulnerability to economic cycles. The performance of the underling(s) might adversely affect the payout. In extreme cases, the ELP may even become worthless. Buying and selling ELP may not necessarily result in any profit, and may sometimes result in loss.

No principal protection: Unless otherwise specified, ELP are not principal protected and you may receive the underlying stock instead of your investment capital upon maturity of the ELP. You are therefore exposed to the risks factor associated with the specific industry of the underlying stock(s). The value of such stock may be substantially lower than your investment capital You may therefore suffer a loss or a substantial loss in your investment in ELP.

Worst of basket: When the ELP are linked to a basket of underlying stocks in a "worst of basket" structure, the payout (in terms of yield/coupon, Early/Final Redemption) might be dependent on the worst performing asset/stock. You are obliged to buy at the strike price the worst-performing stock in the basket, if the final price of the worst-performing stock is below the strike price.

Not the same as investments in the underlying stock: You have no rights in relation to the underlying stock to which payments under the ELP are linked, such as rights to receive dividends or voting rights in respect of stock in the equity issuer. Where ELP are to be redeemed by physical delivery of stock or debt obligations of an equity issuer you will not receive any rights as a holder of such stock or obligations until such time as they are delivered to you.

Credit and insolvency risk of the issuer: The ELP constitute the Issuer's direct, unsubordinated and unsecured obligations and rank and will rank (subject to certain statutory exceptions) equally with all its other unsecured obligations (other than subordinated obligations, if any) from time to time outstanding. The ELP is subject to the risk of the issuer and guarantor, as applicable and no other companies. ELP is subject to the risk of the issuer defaulting on its obligations. The credit ratings of the issuer assigned by the credit agencies do not guarantee the creditworthiness of the issuer. Should the Issuer become insolvent or go into liquidation or default on its obligations, you will be ranked as an unsecured creditor of the issuer and may lose your entire investment, regardless of the movements in the underlying exchange rate or the terms of ELP.

Issuer's early termination risk: The issuer may terminate the ELP prior to their maturity for various reasons pursuant to the terms and conditions of the ELP, including taxation reasons, illegality or events beyond the control. If the issuer terminates the ELP early, the issuer will, if and to the extent permitted by applicable law, pay a holder of the ELP such amount as it determines to be the then fair market value of the ELP, taking into account, without limitation (i) the cost to the Issuer of unwinding any related underlying hedging arrangements; (ii) any replacement liquidity costs and/or (iii) any other appropriate costs. Therefore, the amount payable to you (if any) on such early termination may be substantially less than your original investment. You will bear re-investment risk that the prevailing market conditions may have changed and may hinder you from making any further investment under similar terms.

Be distinguished from savings or time deposits: ELP is an investment product and is not equivalent to a time deposit, and is unsecured and is not guaranteed (unless there is guarantor). ELP is not a protected deposit and is not protected by the Deposit Protection Scheme in Hong Kong. Investment in ELP involves risks not associated with regular bank deposit and should not be regarded as a substitute for regular savings or time deposit.

Liquidity risk: ELP are designed to be held to maturity and there may be no active secondary market quotations for them. If you try to sell the ELP, you may not be able to find a buyer, or the sale price may be much lower than the cost you invested. You may suffer a loss if you sell your ELP before maturity.

Currency risk: If ELP is not denominated in your home currency, and you choose to convert it back to your home currency upon maturity, you should note that exchange rate fluctuations may have an adverse impact on, and the potential loss may offset (or even exceed), the potential return of the ELP.

(Applicable to Third Party Structured Note linked to Equity) Reliance on distributors and charges: If you hold the Note through a distributor, you will have to rely on your distributor to distribute notices, make payment or deliveries, enforce any rights under the Note. You will also be exposed to the credit risk of the distributor. Your potential return on the Note may be reduced by the amount of any handling fee or other charges you have to pay your distributor when you make your application.

(Applicable to ELI) Maximum loss upon BOCHK's default or insolvency. ELI constitute general, unsecured and unsubordinated contractual obligations of Bank of China (Hong Kong) Limited and of no other person (including the ultimate holding company of our group, Bank of China Limited). If you purchase ELI, you are relying upon the creditworthiness of Bank of China (Hong Kong) Limited and have no rights under the terms and conditions of ELI against the issuer(s) of the linked stock(s). In the worst case scenario, you could lose all of your investment.
BOCHK is not the ultimate holding company of the group to which we belong and with which our name is identified. The ultimate holding company of our group is Bank of China Limited which does not guarantee the performance of our obligations under ELI.

Risks of Trading of Listed RMB Equity Products (applicable to RMB linked or denominated Note): Investment / Market Risk: Like any investments, RMB equity products are subject to investment risk. The price of the RMB equity products in the secondary market may move up or down. Losses may incur as a result of investing in the products even if the RMB appreciates against HKD or other currencies.

Liquidity Risk: RMB equity products are a new type of investment product in the Hong Kong market. Regular trading or an active secondary market in these products may not be available. Therefore, you may not be able to sell your investments in the RMB equity products on a timely basis, or you may have to offer them for sale at a deep discount to their value in order to find a buyer. If the Central Government of the PRC tightens foreign exchange controls, the liquidity of RMB or RMB equity products in Hong Kong will be affected and you may be exposed to greater liquidity risk.

Currency Risk: If this product is not denominated in your home currency, and you choose to convert it back to your home currency upon maturity, you should note that exchange rate fluctuations may have an adverse impact on, and the potential loss may offset (or even exceed), the potential return of the product. If you are a non-Mainland investor who holds a local currency other than RMB, you will be exposed to currency risk if you invest in RMB equity products. You will incur currency conversion costs, being the spread between buying and selling of RMB, at the time of conversion between your local currency and RMB for the purchase or sale of an RMB equity product. Even if the price of the RMB equity products you are holding remains unchanged, you may not receive the same amount of HKD when you sell the products due to the spread between buying and selling of RMB. RMB is a restricted currency and is subject to foreign exchange controls. Although the Central Government of the PRC has relaxed the restrictions by allowing banks in Hong Kong to conduct RMB business in a specified scope, RMB is still not freely convertible in Hong Kong. You may not be able to convert RMB at your preferred time and/or in your preferred amount or conversion cannot be made, which may lead to investment losses. The policies of the Central Government of the PRC on foreign exchange control are subject to change, and your investment may be adversely affected.

Exchange Rate Risk: RMB equity products that are traded and settled in RMB are exposed to exchange rate risk. The fluctuation in the exchange rate of RMB may result in losses in the event that the customer converts RMB into Hong Kong dollars or other foreign currencies. Moreover, there is no guarantee that RMB will not depreciate. Any devaluation of RMB could adversely affect the value of your investment in the RMB equity products. RMB equity products are not an investment instrument for speculating on RMB/HKD exchange rate movements.

Default Risk & Credit Risk: In general, RMB equity products are exposed to the usual kind of default risks that might be associated with equity products denominated in other currencies. The performance of RMB equity products is affected by the underlying business performance and a variety of other factors in connection with the issuers, and is subject to the credit risks associated with the special profile or special business strategy that the issuers may have.

Emerging Market Risk: RMB equity products associating with the market of the Mainland of China are particularly subject to risks that may arise from the relevant market/industry/sector and other factors such as change in government policies, taxation and political development in the Mainland.

Risks of Trading of ETF/Synthetic ETF Products (applicable to ETF/Synthetic ETF linked Note):

Derivatives risk: Synthetic ETFs are structured product involving derivatives. Derivatives have a high degree of price variability and are subject to occasional rapid and substantial changes. An ETF's losses may be greater if it invests in derivatives than if it invests only in conventional securities. Compared to conventional securities, derivatives can be more sensitive to changes in interest rates or to sudden fluctuations in market prices. There may be transaction costs associated with the use of derivatives. In addition, many derivatives are not traded on exchanges. As a result, synthetic ETFs are subject to the risk of the inability or refusal to perform with respect to such contracts on the part of any counterparties with which that synthetic ETFs trade. This risk is also affected by the fact that over-the-counter derivatives markets are generally not regulated by government authorities and participants in these markets are not required to make continuous markets in the contracts they trade.

Tracking error risk: ETF may trade deeply discount to the NAV of the underlying index due to inefficiency of replication strategy. The tracking error is mainly caused by transaction fees, exchange rate of underlying index and corporate actions of underlying index etc. There may be disparity between the performance of the synthetic ETF and the performance of the underlying index due to, for instance, failure of the tracking strategy, currency differences, fees and expenses.

Market risk: Clients are exposed to the political, economic, currency and other risks related to the synthetic ETF's underlying index. The return on ETF is dependent on movements in the underlying index. The price of underlying index may move rapidly and are affected by a number of factors including, national and international financial, economic, political and other conditions and events and may also be subject to intervention by central banks and other bodies.

Trading at discount or premium: The price of ETF is determined by the supply and demand of the market and may trade at a discount or premium of NAV. Client may suffer substantially at the times of fund liquidation if Client buys the ETF at a premium which is much higher than the NAV. Where the index/market that a synthetic ETF tracks is subject to restricted access, the efficiency in unit creation or redemption to keep the price of the synthetic ETF in line with its NAV may be disrupted, causing the synthetic ETF to trade at a higher premium or discount to its NAV. Client who buys a synthetic ETF at a premium may not be able to recover the premium in the event of termination.

Liquidity risk: Liquidity of ETF depends on many factors such as market volatility, market sentiment or global economic data. Its liquidity may be poor sometimes even it is listed in exchanges. A higher liquidity risk is involved if a synthetic ETF involves derivatives which do not have an active secondary market. Wider bid-offer spreads in the price of the derivatives may result in losses.

Currency risk: ETF may invest in different countries or globally and Client bears a foreign exchange risk resulting from change of exchange rate of underlying index and denomination currency of an ETF. Sometimes, the currencies that the ETF invests in are not freely convertible and the conversion of that currency is subject to exchange controls and restrictions which may affect the movement in the exchange rate of underlying index.

Emerging market risk: Investments in an ETF of the emerging markets are more sensitive to social, political or economic development in the region than those in developed markets, and subject to risk such as market suspension, restrictions on foreign investment and control or repatriation of capital. There are also possibilities of nationalization, expropriation or confiscatory taxation, foreign exchange control, political changes, government regulation, social instability or diplomatic developments which could adversely affect the economics of the emerging markets or the value of ETF investment.

Concentration risk: ETF may invest in single country and sector.

Tax and other risks: Like all investments, an ETF may be subject to tax imposed by the local authorities in the market whose index it tracks and is subject to the risk of change in policy of the reference market.

Overseas exchanges: Client should also note that an ETF listed on overseas exchanges may not have the same specifications as described above or any specifications at all in their names to differentiate synthetic ETF from physical ETF of other replication strategies. Besides, the synthetic ETF listed on overseas exchanges may have more complex structures, such as the use of derivatives to adopt an inverse and/or leveraged strategy which may not be suitable for general investing public. Client should consult their own financial advisers for independent financial advice if in doubt.

Counterparty risk of issuer of financial derivative: Where a synthetic ETF in derivatives to replicate the index performance, Clients are exposed to the credit risk of the counterparties who issued the derivatives, in addition to the risks relating to the index. Further, potential contagion and concentration risks of the derivative issuers should be taken into account (e.g. since derivative issuers are predominantly international financial institutions, the failure of one derivative counterparties of the synthetic ETF may have a “knock-on” effect on other derivative counterparties of the synthetic ETF). Some synthetic ETFs have collateral to reduce the counterparty risk, but there may be a risk that the market value of the collateral has fallen substantially when the synthetic ETF seeks to realize the collateral.

Collateral risk: While some synthetic ETFs may hold, or have recourse to, collateral to mitigate the exposure to credit risks of the derivatives counterparties, the collateral may not comprise any constituent securities of the index. The collateral may also be concentrated in particular market(s), sector(s) and/or securities issued by specific sovereign or public issuer(s) which may not be related to the underlying index. Furthermore, when an ETF seeks to exercise its rights against the collateral upon any default of counterparties, the market value of the collateral could be substantially less than the amount secured if the market drops sharply before the collateral is realised, thereby resulting in significant loss to the ETF.

Risks of Trading of RQFII A-share ETF Products (applicable to RQFII A-share ETF linked Note):

Risks relating to the novelty of the product: RQFII A-share ETF is the first RMB physical A-share ETF issued outside mainland China to invest directly in the Mainland A-share market which is inherently a market with restricted access. The novelty and untested nature of such products make them riskier than traditional ETFs investing directly in markets other than the Mainland.

Risks relating to the RQFII regime: The RQFII programme is still at a pilot stage. The relevant policy and rules have only been recently announced by the relevant Mainland authorities and there may be uncertainties as to its implementation. Such policy and rules are subject to change and interpretation by Mainland authorities. The uncertainty and change of the laws and regulations on the Mainland (including the RQFII policy and rules) may adversely impact the RQFII A-share ETFs. The limit of RQFII investment quota may cause units of RQFII A-share ETFs to trade at a significant premium to their NAV.

RMB currency risk: Please refer to Risk no. 19

Risks relating to Mainland markets and concentration risk: RQFII A-share ETFs primarily invest in securities in the Mainland markets and are subject to concentration risk. Investing in the Mainland markets involve certain risks and special considerations as compared with investment in more developed economies or markets, such as greater political, tax, economic, foreign exchange, liquidity and regulatory risks.

Risks relating to RMB trading and settlement of units: It is likely that not all intermediaries are prepared to carry out trading and settlement of RMB-denominated securities. In addition, the liquidity and trading price of the units of RQFII A-share ETFs may be adversely affected by the limited availability of RMB outside mainland China and the restrictions on the conversion between foreign currency and RMB.

Risks relating to the Mainland tax regime: There are risks and uncertainties associated with the current Mainland tax laws applicable to capital gains realised by RQFIIs through their investments on the Mainland. Although RQFII A-share ETFs may have made a tax provision in respect of potential tax liability, the provision may be excessive or inadequate. Any shortfall between the provisions and actual tax liabilities may be covered by the RQFII A-share ETF's assets and may therefore adversely affect the RQFII A-share ETF's net asset value (NAV).

Trading differences risk: The trading days or hours of the Mainland and Hong Kong stock markets are not exactly the same in terms of trading hours and business days. Investors may not able to purchase or sell the units of the RQFII A-share ETF during local holidays. Likewise, during Mainland holidays, the market price of underlying securities may not be updated while the RQFII A-share ETF is still trading. Furthermore, A-shares are subject to trading bands which restrict increases and decreases in the trading price, trading of RQFII A-share ETFs listed on the SEHK is not subject to such restrictions. All those differences may affect the level of premium or discount of the trading price of the ETF's units to its NAV.

Mainland brokerage risk: Only one brokerage can be appointed for each market (the Shenzhen Stock Exchange and the Shanghai Stock Exchange) to execute transactions (i.e. trading of A-shares) for the RQFII A-share ETF in mainland China. As such the RQFII A-share ETF will rely on only one brokerage for each market, which may be the same brokerage. If the manager of the RQFII A-share ETF is unable to use its designated brokerage in mainland China, the operation of the RQFII A-share ETF will be adversely affected and may cause the units of the RQFII A-share ETF to trade at a premium or discount to the RQFII A-share ETF's NAV or the RQFII A-share ETF may not be able to track the underlying index.

Government intervention and restrictions risk: The operation and market making activities of RQFII A-share ETFs may be affected by interventions by the governments and regulators in the financial markets, such as an imposition of trading restrictions, a ban on "naked" short selling or the suspension of short selling for certain stocks.

New manager and reliance on parent company risk: The manager of RQFII A-share ETFs may not be experienced in managing ETFs and may heavily leverage on the expertise and systems of its Mainland parent company to support the RQFII A-share ETF's investments in the A-share markets. Any disruption in the assistance from the Mainland parent company may adversely affect the operations of the RQFII A-share ETF.

Reliance on market maker risk: Market makers may not be as interested in making a market in ETF units denominated in RMB. Any disruption to the availability of RMB may adversely affect the capability of market makers in providing liquidity for the units of RQFII A-share ETFs. The liquidity of the ETF may be adversely affected if there is no market maker for the fund or if the market making activities are not effective.

Risks of Trading of Dual Counter RQFII A-share ETF Products (applicable to Dual Counter RQFII A-share ETF linked Note):

New model risks: The Dual Counter model in Hong Kong is new. Dual Counter RQFII A-share ETFs allow units to be traded on SEHK in RMB and Hong Kong dollar under two separate counters. The novelty and untested nature of Dual Counter RQFII A-share ETFs may bring additional risks for investment in Dual Counter RQFII A-share ETFs.

Inter-counter trading risks: If your intermediary (e.g. brokerage or bank) does not provide both Hong Kong dollar and RMB trading services at the same time or offer inter-counter transfer services to support Dual Counter trading, you will not be able to buy units traded in one counter and sell them in the other counter. Even if your intermediary is able to provide such service, it may impose an earlier cut-off time, other procedures and fees.

Risks relating to different trading prices in RMB and HKD counters: The RMB counter and HKD counter are two distinct and separate markets. The trading prices of units of the same RQFII A-shares ETF in the two counters may be different and may not always maintain a close relationship depending on factors such as market supply and demand, liquidity in each counter and the exchange rate between RMB and Hong Kong dollar in both onshore and offshore markets.

Risks relating to dividend payment: Dividends of a Dual Counter A-share RQFII A-share ETF are declared in RMB but may be paid in RMB only or, where so offered by the manager, in RMB as well as Hong Kong dollar depending on an investor's election. Depending on the distribution policy of individual Dual Counter RQFII A-share ETF, an investor of units traded in the HKD counter may receive dividend in RMB only. In such circumstances, if such investor does not have an RMB account, he or she may have to bear the fees and charges associated with the conversion of such dividend from RMB into Hong Kong dollar or any other currency.

Risk of bonds trading

The prices of bonds fluctuate, sometimes dramatically. The price of a bond may move up or down, and may become valueless. It is as likely that losses will be incurred rather than profit made as a result of buying and selling bonds

Key Risk Disclosures of bonds

1) Investment risk: The prices of bonds may go up and down and may be volatile. The bonds may even become worthless. Buying and selling bonds may not necessarily result in any profit, and may sometimes result in loss.
2) Issuer / Guarantor credit risk: The return on bonds is linked to the credit of the Issuer and Guarantor, as applicable. The credit ratings assigned by credit rating agencies do not guarantee the creditworthiness of the Issuer and Guarantor, as applicable. In the event that the Issuer defaults, it is possible that you may lose all your investment, including the principal.
3) To be distinguished from savings or time deposits: The bonds are an investment product and are not equivalent to a time deposit, and are unsecured and are not guaranteed (if there is no guarantor). The bonds are not protected deposits under the Deposit Protection Scheme in Hong Kong. The bonds are not principal-protected. The investment in bonds involve risks not associated with regular bank deposits and should not be regarded as a substitute for regular savings or time deposit.
4) Not covered by the Investor Compensation Fund: The bonds are not covered by the Investor Compensation Fund.
5) Interest rate risk: Changes in interest rates may have a significant impact on the market price of the bonds. For example, bond prices generally fall when interest rates rise - In this situation, you may incur a loss from the decrease in market price of the bonds if you sell the bonds before the final maturity date.

6) Currency risk: For bonds not denominated in your home currency, if the currency in which the bonds are denominated depreciates against your home currency during your holding period, and if calculated and settled in your home currency, exchange rate fluctuations may have an adverse impact on, and the potential loss may offset (or even exceed), the investment return.
7) Tenor risk: The bonds have a specified investment period. The longer the investment period of the bonds, the more likely changes in interest rates, exchange rates, market environments and the Issuer's financial and operating conditions may affect the bond value during the investment period. Your actual return (if any) may be substantially lower than expected and you may even suffer losses.
8) Liquidity risk: The bonds are designed to be held to maturity and there may be no active secondary market quotations for the bonds. If you try to sell your bonds before maturity, it may be difficult or impossible to find a buyer, or the sale price may be much lower than the amount you had invested. You may suffer a loss if you sell your bonds before maturity.
9) Applicable for Bonds listed under Chapter 37 of the Main Board Listing Rules ("Chapter 37 Bonds"): The listing documents of Chapter 37 Bonds have not been vetted by The Stock Exchange of Hong Kong Limited ("HKEx") and are not subject to detailed disclosure requirements. The listing status should not be taken as an endorsement of the commercial merit, credit quality or quality of disclosure in the listing documents. The HKEx takes no responsibility for the contents of the listing document and makes no representation as to its accuracy or completeness and expressly disclaim any liability whatsoever for any loss howsoever arising from or in reliance upon the whole or any part of the contents of the listing document. You should pay attention to the prescribed disclaimer statement in the listing document and consider thoroughly before you invest in Chapter 37 Bonds
10) Other risks: There may be other risks associated with the investment of each particular bond which are not mentioned above, please refer to each individual Term Sheet for details.
